“ Man where to start.... Bj was my best friend the only real friend i ever had i had known him since i was 14 years old. I never use that word lightly any more he taught me what a real friend was. There were so so so so many nights and some time days where we would drink wine (always red yellow tail merlot) and sing along to type o negative and some times laugh and some times cry... I can't even begin to count those times.... He was my drinking buddy I'll never have any one ever live up to the standard bj set. I think about him every single day to Ozzy his god son and i his absence is felt every single day. Every aspect of our lives has changed we miss bj. We keep him with us by talking about him. And we bring him up at least 2 times a day telling memories we have. Man..... I wish you were still here bj. I miss you every single day dude. I hope your drinking wine with Pete and looking at me and grinning. Singing type o for me and holding my place with you guys one day. I miss you so terribly.

“ I could fill an entire series of books with the memories we forged. This is not how the story was supposed to end. For more than 30 years I knew you better than anyone. I knew the real you. Our time was one of tides. The rise and fall then rising again. The ebb and flow. Over and over again. As predictable as the rising sun. This last year the tide went out so far we became stranded and separated. I waited for the inevitable rise. It never came. Instead I am left behind standing on worthless sand glaring as the tidal wave approaches. Goodbye my oldest friend, my Brother. Rest in peace. I love you.

To any of his immediate family,

I am Sorry.

After more than 30 years, that's all I got.

Michael,
You were indeed BJ's best friend (brother) and he thought the world of you. You and Ozzie were family to him, even through the recent hard times he was going through. I can't even imagine all the stories you have but I would love to hear them sometime. Please keep in touch!
